UPLANDS COMPLETED

Friends interested in the new Sanatorium at Pleasant Hill will be glad to know that the building is completed and the "family" moved in the past week.

"Uplands," as the sanatorium is called, is an up-to-date building, equipped with running water and electric lights, built to accommodate a dozen or more patients. Its wide porch, which extends on three sides of the building, gives ample space for hammocks and out-door living, both day and night—patients sleeping on the porch except in bad weather.

Dr. Wharton's office is on the main floor, at the end of the porch on the left, and is approached by a private outside stairway on that side. Treatment and operating-room, a sitting hall, linen room, diet kitchen, a ward for women and one for men, four private rooms and two baths complete the main floor, while kitchen, dining-room and a bedroom for workers are in the basement. The fact that the front porch is slightly over the brow of the hill gives privacy to the front porch and affords not only light at the rear—the basement end is practically all in glass—but glimpses of the wide meadow and beautiful uplands away to the north beyond.

This fine property, presented by friends in the village, is full of possibilities, and paths through the lovely strip of woods, and extensive landscape gardening lie foremost in the plans for the future.

Notice of the formal opening of the sanatorium—to which all friends and the general public are cordially invited —will probably appear in next week's paper.
